In the past few years, there has been a trend in pursuing the so-called “小確幸” (a little happiness, the little things in life, or the little happiness in hand) among the young generation in Taiwan. Why do you think that happens and how do you understand it as an emerging culture? What are the pros and cons for the rise of the “little happiness trend”? Please give an example to explicate what counts as “a little happiness” and how “a little happiness” changes the way you see things.
