Choose ONE of the following two topics. (100%)

1. Write a monologue in which from beginning to end the only voice is that of a person talking on the telephone to her (or his) lover, who has left her (or him).
 2. Write a dialogue in which the spoken conversation is accompanied by the unspoken thoughts of the speakers. Perhaps A is trying to persuade B to do something; B is willing to do it, but doesn't want A to know this; or the other way around. Perhaps A likes or admires or loves B, but B does not feel the same way; perhaps B is trying to show this to A, who won't see it; or perhaps B is trying to conceal this from A. Perhaps A thinks that B doesn't like or love her (or him), and B is trying to show otherwise but without success. The possibilities are endless. Use your imagination.
